THE UNIVERSITY FOOT-BALL TEAM

Backs and Ends Better Than Last Year, Put Line Is Weaker.

The foot-ball acason is at its height at the University of Virginia. The team goes up against the Carlisle Indians next Saturday, and one week later plays the Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Rich-mond.

goes up against the Carlisle Indians next saturday, and one week later plays the Virginia Polytechnic Institute in Richmond.

Beckett is a new man and is yet an ancertain quantity. He weighs '186 pounds and is extremely muscular. Left guard has been a hard place to fill this year. Kite has been playing left guard in the recent games, He is quick and invariably gets the jump on his man, but his lack of weight makes it impossible for him to become a first-class guard. He barely reaches 100 pounds. Hull played last year at end/ Nunez has plenty of weight, but is slow.

At right guard Spates will once more struggie for the orange and bine. At the two tackles Virginia has nothing to fear. Council and Branch Johnson have been the All-Southern tackles for two seasons and are in better shape than ever. Williams, who will be at right end, is one of the best players on the team. Springer, who is playing the other end, has fallen off in his work of late, and may give way to Warren. The latter is a good defensive player and fast, and may give way to Warren. The latter is a good defensive player and fast, running down punts.

Pollard, at quarter, is the same fast, reliable man that alded so materially in the splendid showing made by Virginia in the Indian games, His work shows no fulling off from past seasons.

E. H. Johnson is a brother of Branch Johnson. He played last year at the Virginia Milltary Ensbitute, where he was captain of the team. His running and the later is a first year man, but his work is of such a character that he had no difficulty in winning a place at half.

At full Yaneey is all that could be desired. He weighs 178 pounds, and makes every ounce of it count.

FOOT-BALL OUTLOOK.

Herald's Sum Up on Conditions of Big Teams Up to Date.

The New York Herald of yesterday sums up foot-ball as it applies so far this season to the big 'Varsity teams. Here is what it says: In the light of Saturday's interesting work on the gridiron a fairly reliable estimate of the strength of the big college elevens may be made. Columbia and Pennsylvania may be read out of the first flight with some denied of justice. The exhibition of the Morningade men in their first really big game of the season was miserable. There can be no excuse for such a display, in view or the hard work of so tried and somie-and a conch

Individually the men were strong and rugged, though not properly taught, Lamison, the best man on the way, learned the game of the conter team. Captain Torrey, playing a position for which he is in no way qualified, was the weakest spot on the team.

Pennsylvania's material is good enough to suit the most exacting, but her coaching system is hopelessly out of date. Nothing but a revolution in method will restore the Red and Blue to the once proud position it occupied in the world of foot-ball.

At present writing, Harvard and Yâle, the latter, notwithstanding the defeat at West Point, seem to be the leaders among the big clevens. Unexpectedly and formaticly the Crimson glants showed some defece of fire and dash in Saturday's work. Harvard has the material for a spiendid eleven. The Cambridge coaches are making a pretty race against time. The eleven is being evenly and steadily developed, and should the Crimson defeat tale. Edgar Wrightington must be acknowledged as a master hand.

ATTHE JO

"Only a Shop Gir!" is the bill at the Bijou this week. This is the third season that this melodrama has been presented at that house, so its patrons are quite familiar with it. Lottie Williams is cast as "Josie," and she does much to make the plece "go." Miss Williams's work is of the strenuous kind. In fact, the plece itself is of the same order. No scene is allowed to drag. There is quite a lively time on the stage during part of the action of the play. In the second act prerything is awfully jolly. This is the supper scene in Josie's lodgings. The players manage to keep the table on the stage, though the musicians in the orchestra pit must at times become uneasy, for things are certainly "coming their way."

The big act of the play is the third.

for things are certainly "coming their way."

The big act of the play is the third, in which the audience is given a glimpso in a department store. Of course, the things they do and say never happen in a department store, just as most of the things they do and say in melodram never happen in real life. That is just where the fun comes in. Any one can see a department store any day, but not like the one in the third act of "Only a Shop Cliri."

Oirl."
In this act Al. Lester sings a medley of "up-to-date" numbers, and is given a genuine encore from orchestra to the top gallery. He responds and sings a little song, slightly off color, which Georgo Wilson, the minsters, was singing fifteen years ago. The first part of Mr. Lester's specialty was very good, but as for the encore—well, this is the season of the year to roast chestnuts.

"Under Southern Skies." The South has furnished material for a number of plays which have been very nopular in public esteem and obtained large pecuniary returns. But the play which is now pre-eminent in favor—in fact, the only one dealing with Southern life which is now prominently before the public—is Lottle Blair Parker's "Under Softhern Skies." Other Southern plays the many be, but as no recent play of Ne'. England life equals in popularity or interest the same authors "Way Down East," so no other of the newer plays dealing with life in the South approaches "Under Southern Skies." This play is now in its fourth season. It has charmed and amused thousands of people since its first presentation, and with each succeeding visit to the many cities where it has been given the audiences are of larger and larger proportions. It is a play which can be seen again and again with renewed interest, for lies story of life in the South is such a strong one. Theatre patrons will have a chance to see this great play of life in the South, as it appears to-night at the Academy.

Claus Bogel's Success.

Claus Bogel's Success.

Claus Bogel, who was so universally praised last season by the dramatic critics on account of his impersonation of oswald, the unfortunate son. In Bosen's "Chosts," has the same part this season, and will be seen in the production of this wonderful drama at the Academy tomorrow, mattnee and night.

In the play of emotion, which spans the space between juvenile precocity and bitterest tragedy, he supplies a most depending integral. Nor has his only success been in "Ghosts," Mr. Bogel created, the part of Dr. Rank in Ibsen's "A Doll's House," with Mrs. Fiske, and won signal honors for his portrayal, He also scored heavily in "Little Italy," "Miranda of the Balcony," "A Bit of Old Chelsen," "Tess" and "Unorna."

WASHINGTON, October 24.—The Navy Department has determined that Secretary Tat's visit to Paonama will start from Penascola instead of Tampa, as was originally projected, the reason being that the Columbia, which is to carry the party, cannot safely enter Tampa harbor because of her great draft. The party expects to start from Pensacola on the 14th.
